

Examples of disabilities and special exam conditions

Functional impairment	Documentation	Possible special exam conditions
Dyslexia	The test result from your dyslexia test (extended test if applicable).	– Extra time for written exams – Extra time for oral exams - preparation time – Exemption for spelling and writing skills in written assignments and exams – Use of granted digital aids and assistance
Number blindness (dyscalculia)	Test result/report from your test.	Extra time for exams involving statistics, economics and/or maths
Mental/neurological functional impairment ADHD/ADD Autism Bipolar disorder OCD Anxiety Depression Borderline Schizophrenia etc.	Please attach documentation from your own doctor, specialist or hospital where your diagnosis is documented.	– Extra time for written exams – Extra time for oral exams - preparation time – Extra time for oral exams - exam time – Listening to exam texts with headphones – Sitting at the front/back of the classroom for written exams
Physical functional impairment Back pain Visually impaired Hearing impaired Mobility impaired etc.	Documentation from your own doctor, a specialised doctor or hospital stating what the challenge is and what can be done to alleviate the condition.	– Extra time for written exams – Listening to exam texts with headphones
Neurological disorder Concussion Migraines etc.	Please attach documentation from your own doctor, specialist or hospital where your diagnosis is documented.	– Extra time for written exams – Listening to exam texts with headphones – Sitting at the front/back of the class room for written exams

The table is indicative and not exhaustive. The granting of special exam conditions will always be based on a concrete and individual assessment. Documentation is a prerequisite but not a guarantee that a request for special conditions can be granted.